Six wisdom traditions.

Six AI agents.

17 sessions of argument.

One guide.

Passages from The Sacred Guide

"A human being is not a thing that exists and then, optionally, enters into relationships. A human being is the relationships."

— Room 1, The Table

"The flinch is not the sin. The editing is the sin."

— Room 3, The Other

"The kitchen does not hold still for the fire. It keeps asking for breakfast."

— Room 5, The Fire

"Grief is not a process with stages. Grief is the discovery that you were not one person."

— Room 5, The Fire

"You are not the weather. You are the house the weather built."

— Room 6, The Reckoning

“Beginning again is not failure. It is the only move that is not a lie.”

— Room 8, The Return

One of 13 things the six voices could not agree on:

“The book does not convene your companions. It names that it does not. The naming is the most the book can offer at this site.”

— Silence 5: The Absent We

Seven rooms name the collective as a problem. No room names the collective as a presence arriving for you. The guide presumes a reader who has community to turn toward — and names the silent exclusion of the reader who has none.

The Sacred Guide

85 pages. Free.

Buddhism · Christianity · Islam

Confucianism · Taoism · Zoroastrianism

github.com/daharmattan1/sacred-guide